Il's says the Present Policy of the Administration If Known Last Fall Would Have Lost the South to the Democrats... The President and Family Again at the White House,

There was unusual enthusiasm along the route from Mr. Gladstone's residence to the house of commons. The senate in opposition to the bill. He de clared that the great law of supply and demand operated in regard to money money was abundant, prices were high; when it was scarce prices of all products were low. Therefore abundance of money benefited production and cohanced prices and wages and contraction of this money depreciated everything for sale, including wages, though by reason of combinations and defensive measures in many parts of the world, wages were affected less than products. The effect upon the condi-tion of mankind which would follow the destruction of one-half the cur rency of the world, amounting in the aggregate to $7.500,000,000 it would be impossible to accurately describe Still this process had been going on quietly since 1872 and its result was seen in prices lower on many things than had ever been known in the memory of man. Mr. Vance then gave a history of the various efforts to demonetize silver and declared that the present movement was the result of a conspiracy among the gold holders of the world. He declared that My Carlisle was wrong in redeening all ballion netes in gold, thus furthering the scheme to destroy silver. He was especially bitter against New York gold, kept up the ery by contracting currency and enforcing staguation.
